green dragon

Green Dragon is a Cambodian Landrace Sativa crossed with a New York City Diesel, creating a high average Sativa to Indica ratio of 5:1, with lemon lime citrus notes and just a hint of cherry. A very potent upward high. This strain was created more than 20 years ago. The seeds sat for a decade. In 2012 the family started with 300+ seeds to find this gem. One seed stood high above the rest, it became our Green Dragon. Happy Holidays!

'TIS THE SEASON

Let's take a diversion of comments on Trump, Eugene City Council, pot, election results, healthcare, housing, etc., and declare a "Merry Christmas, Best Wishes & Happy 2017!"

ALL HAIL TRUMPTOPIA

A quote from Marine Gen. James Mattis (Trump's pick for Secretary of Defense): "Be polite, be professional, but have a plan to kill everybody you meet."

Does this mercy extend to Trump? God forbid anyone gets punched in the face.

Mattis said "everybody," so I'll take a general at his word.

Mattis probably sees Trump as a useful bobblehead — tip of the spear, so to speak. Broken weapons can be discarded. Generals learn stuff like this while working above the visible ceiling. Visible ceiling means: Folks you have never read about in People magazine, doing stuff you never hear about from morning show TV.

Would Mad Dog stage a plane crash? A drowning? Only one Marine knows for sure.

After the Commander-in-Chief declares martial law and a shooting war with Canada (or somewhere) gets trumped out, America will need some serious law and order right here stateside.

Liberals and squishy-soft democrats have just been issued new marching orders.

Let's target everyone ... except, of course, those Nazi skinhead alt-right gangsters right next door in D.C. at the Ronald Reagan Federal building.

In the 1940s, America sent soldiers to Europe to kill Nazi Fascists; ironic, isn't it — that was a policy Ronald Reagan supported.

Yes sir, times have changed.

Orwellian enthusiasm will be deployed to the masses, even if that requires waterboarding and torture.

Welcome now to our New World Disorder, citizen nobody. People not wealthy just became obsolete.

Remember, "the minority has spoken."

All hail Trumptopia.

SCAPEGOATING IN ACTION

On one hand, we have a professor who impersonated a black doctor. On the other hand, we have a university accepting a billion dollars from Nike, a company that coldly profits from exploiting brown women in Asia in virtual slavery conditions.

The fact that we are aware of one event and not the other is the function of scapegoating.

University of Oregon students successfully pressured the university to divest from South African Apartheid gold years ago. Where's the consciousness now?

NO CONSENT

Here's an invitation for you, Dan Mattheisen [Letters, 12/15], to earn your very own participation ribbon: All you have to do is attend the Women's March in Eugene.

On Jan. 21, 2017, in conjunction with the Women's March on Washington, Portland and other cities around the country will unite in Eugene, standing together in solidarity with our families and children for the protection of our rights, our safety, our health and our community, recognizing that our diversity is the strength of our country.

Yep, Dan, I'll see you at the new Federal Courthouse at noon on Jan. 21. We'll exchange participation buttons, OK? But I promise I won't insult you or be condescending by calling your voting choice a "childish response."

And no need to quell any sad feelings. But thanks for the concern anyway.

According to an ancient maxim of common law, "silence gives consent" (Qui tacet, consentit). And like so many citizens in this democracy, I am not consenting to a Trump presidency and I will not be silent. Instead, I will be pushing back and intentionally resisting the advances of the sexual predator, bully and racist in the "Make America White" House that you voted for ... silently.

RAPISTITUTION

According to a former prostitute interviewed by Chris Hedges on a recent On Contact program on RT.com, there is no such thing as "sex work."

"Sex for pay" is not "sex" and it is not "work." It is all rape, and henceforth I will be referring to the institution of prostitution by its proper name: rapistitution. Pornography also needs to be similarly renamed and should properly be called rapography.

COMMISSIONER PETE SORENSON IGNORES DEMOCRATS: WHY?

Dear reader, I've missed you. We each made our own decisions prior to Election Day regarding what we might do based on the outcome. I voted by mail and chose knee replacement surgery before the election. My doctor then placed me on planet Norco 5, otherwise known as Vicodinville, for eight weeks of recovery. Apparently, something big happened while I was gone.

Try to make sense out of this election. President Obama called it a "clarifying moment" before he left on his Hawaiian holiday vacation last week. No shit! And how the hell did Hillary Clinton only narrowly beat Donald Trump (by 554 votes at last count) in the same 4th congressional district where Peter DeFazio, one of the most progressive legislators in the country, soundly trounced his opponent by over 15 points?

Anyway, I'm back to Planet Earth now and Lane County. Holy Bong Water, Batman! What the hell did those crazy Lane County commissioners just do? An unlikely alliance of Pat Farr, Faye Stewart and Pete Sorenson voted 3-2 for James Manning over current Rep. Val Hoyle to replace Chris Edwards in Senate District 7. Hoyle was the first choice of Lane County Democrats.

Just to be clear, this is not about James Manning. I do not at all minimize the historic opportunity that we have in appointing the first African-American legislator from Lane County. James will bring a much needed dedication and voice to the Senate. I wish him the best of luck.

I knew Val as a local Democrat activist long before she first ran for office. I'm a strong supporter of her progressive politics, including her courageous efforts as house majority leader last session to pass Senate Bill 941 and remove the loopholes in background checks for firearms. And she led the fight for the creation of Junction City's mental health facility.

But the commissioners chose the third choice submitted by local Democratic precinct members. Why? Let's say you're a county commissioner faced with a 2017 state legislative session staring at a $1.7 billion shortfall in its next biennial budget and the potential closure of Junction City's state psychiatric hospital (think mental health services and jobs lost in your own friggin' county): Why wouldn't you send your strongest, most experienced advocate to Salem? I'm just askin'!

Stewart's vote against Val is understandable; he's a diehard Republican gun-nut doing whatever the Oregon senate Republicans tell him to do. Even Republican Farr's vote — and his convenient newfound concern about racial under-representation in the Oregon State Legislature — is politically understandable. It's no secret that Farr is setting himself up for a 4th congressional district run when DeFazio steps down. This vote got Farr support from the right wing of the GOP while allowing him to take a progressive stand on increasing diversity in the Senate (certainly an important and laudable issue).

But Sorenson, the only Democrat commissioner, ignored the first two choices of his own county Democrats and picked the third choice. Why?

The R-G suggested pressure brought by the gun-nut lobby to punish Val. But no one is saying that Sorenson opposed SB 941. What folks are saying is that he voted with the gun lobby who wanted to make a point of punishing Val for her vote on background checks. The result is he delivered Oregon Senate Republicans and the Oregon Firearms Federation a victory.

Why would Sorenson do that? Is he somehow smarter than all the other Democrats? Our entire federal Democrat delegation contacted him and asked him to appoint Val because of the need for experience in Salem dealing with the challenges Oregon faces in the next biennium with the potential loss of the Affordable Care Act and Planned Parenthood Title X funding as well as other federal issues.

Gov. Kate Brown and our Lane Democratic legislators called Sorenson to say that they really needed Val's ability and experience to be able to hit the ground running in a potentially nasty 2017 legislative session. Key labor, consumer protection and environmental leaders contacted him to ask for his support of Val. Pete Sorenson ignored all of that and sided with the Senate Republicans and the gun lobby.

Some folks suggest this was simply political payback for Val's support of Andy Stahl when he ran against Sorenson four years ago. But no one can truly know what Sorenson's motive was. Except him.

Was it one too many drinks at the genius bar? Or good old-fashioned political vengeance? Either way, Sorenson ignored his own party.

Stay tuned.

We don't believe in numbers and statistics, we only believe in the voice of the People. First matter of business is to rename Ferry Street as Faerie Street; how this has missed the city council's attention is beyond me.

Our city manager is obviously slacking off — such laziness is deplorable.

Next, the shambling state of our city needs to be addressed. There's not enough good vibes in town anymore and too many hobos; now our city wants to further encourage fostering criminals!

same thing as portraying a black person. The intolerant demagogic hatred thrown in the direction of Prof. Shurtz should be recognized as intolerant demagogic hatred. In modern theater, there is discussion over productions using exclusively black casts or individuals traditionally portrayed as one ethnicity being filled by a black (or whatever color) actor, what this means, and how it engages audiences to think about classical stories with modern dressing.

Forget this narrative about the "association" of the "worst" stereotypes; let us be judged for ourselves and our actions, in which the mere appearance of blackface isn't some kind of shortcut analogy for the "worst" racism and the most depraved individual. Professor Shurtz didn't mock anyone, but she failed to appreciate the sort of vicious reaction her profession gives to the appearance of a difference in thinking. Diversity is so important that we all must think the same way about it.

small that they can't turn around. When vulnerable newborn calves are put into cages that keep them from moving to make their meat tender, only to be killed at six months of age, it's considered a delicacy. This delicacy is called veal, a meat cherished for being tender and juicy. The thought of eating an animal that went through that disgusts me and I have no idea how anyone can eat it. READING ON RACISM

Whatever one concludes about the Halloween costume of Prof. Nancy Schurtz, she was completely right in promoting Black Man in a White Coat.

I trust anyone who has read this excellent discussion of race and the inadequacies of American medical treatment in general would have to agree. Without the costume controversy, I might not have heard of the book. I am, therefore, indebted to Prof. Schultz and believe she is owed complete exoneration.

LIGHT AND LOVE

To be a beacon of light to others is still our goal. James Baldwin wisely said, "One discovers the light in darkness. That is what darkness is for." More than ever, the world needs our light. James Baldwin also told us, "I know we often lose ... and how often one feels that one cannot start again." Now is the time to show our strength in love. The world does not need more hate, bullying, separatism, fear, anger and other destructive and negative thoughts and emotions. This is not our path.

We must be unafraid to face the dark and to stare it down with light and love. "Darkness cannot drive out darkness; only light can do that. Hate cannot drive out hate; only love can do that." Thank you, Martin Luther King, Jr.

Shaming, aggressiveness and cruelty are not strengths. We do justice to our better angels by being strong and determined in our compassion, while fearless and uncompromising in our support of those who are in need. We are more powerful in our light than we can ever imagine. We choose to join with others to be a lighthouse.

What we face is difficult but not impossible. The impossible we can do.

VIEWPOINT

BY DAN BRYANT

On the Frontlines of the Unhoused

EUGENE NEEDS MORE REST STOPS

There is an old story about a village that dedicated itself to pulling children out of a river, until one day one of their members left the project and began walking up stream. "Where are you going?" someone asks. "We need you here!"

The deserter replies, "I am going to find out who is throwing these children into the river!"

I am one of those who fancied going upstream to stop the growing tide of homelessness, but I am increasingly finding that I must devote my time to pulling people out of the river. I cite just this one example from the day I write this, Dec. 8.

I was woken at 6:30 am by a call from our partners with the Egan Warming Center. The decision was made the previous day not to open that night based on the weather projection. Unfortunately, that projection turned out to be wrong and most of us woke to frozen roads. Schools were closed, many people took the morning off. But this brave soul was up most the night trying to help as many as she could.

"Would we consider opening the church that morning so people can come in and warm up?" she asked. "Send some volunteers and I'll be right down," I replied.

When I arrived at 7 am, I found seven people sleeping on the property. A handful of volunteers appeared and we gave our sleepers, and around 30 others, a temporary respite from the cold, a hot cup of coffee and a cold bowl of cereal. It was all we had on such short notice. (One dear volunteer showed up after hearing on KLCC that we would be open!)

One of those who came in from the cold was "Joe," a gentleman in a wheelchair I had helped earlier that week at the request of Senior and Disability Services (SDS). Joe is 66, and suffered a back injury that has made one leg useless. He has several other health issues and was banned from riding the bus due to his unpleasant smell.

SDS was close to getting him housed and said that he only needed a night or two in a motel. I found a motel on West 6th that assured it had a wheelchair accessible room available. When I showed up, however, the owner of the motel, seeing Joe and knowing that I was paying for his room, told me that the room was no longer available.

I suspected discrimination against Joe and later confirmed in fact that the motel had a policy of not renting to homeless people in wheelchairs, a clear violation of the American with Disabilities Act. But I didn't have time to fight that fight and found a room for Joe at Motel 6.

Joe spent the following night at the Egan Warming Center and the night after that in the Dusk to Dawn program run by St. Vincent de Paul. There, difficulties getting to a restroom landed him back at the church, more desperate than ever.

Thankfully, Joe had a champion at SDS who spent most of this very cold day working to get him shelter. With a little help from Rep. Val Hoyle, we got him admitted to the hospital for a full evaluation and after that, we thought, to a foster home in Sweet Home

Why Sweet Home? It was the closest facility the SDS worker could find that had a bed available. One challenge remained: transportation to the hospital. After waiting nearly three hours for CAHOOTS and needing to close the office for the evening, I finally loaded Joe into my vehicle and took him to the hospital.

There I found both CAHOOTS vans and two very busy teams that had one of those days running from one call to the next. I informed them they had one less call to make.

Back at the church, I had to tell three different people that, unfortunately, Egan would not be open tonight. The next day I learned that the Sweet Home facility would not take Joe, as he did not have a health care provider in Linn County. He was released from the hospital and told his only option was the Eugene Mission until a bed in a foster home somewhere in Lane County could be found.

I tell this long story only to illustrate the crisis in which we are in: All the agencies working with the unhoused are maxed out.

This year St. Vincent de Paul quadrupled the Dusk to Dawn program, where people are sleeping in mash tents, and it was immediately filled with a long waiting list. People who qualify for additional services like Joe cannot get them because there are few available spaces in Lane County.

EW recently ran an article calling for a new public shelter downtown. I am skeptical that downtown is the right location, but the need for a new shelter in any location is abundantly clear.

Because I serve on the Poverty and Homelessness Board, where we are working on plans to add 600 beds to our emergency system, I am well aware that building a public shelter, finding the funds to operate it and the location to site it will take years.

We don't have years.

I know personally of three people who have died on our streets just in the past two years. Their stories break my heart, like that of the one gentleman I found sleeping outside our office one cold morning a few years back. Hopelessly addicted and yet a very sweet, gentle soul who wouldn't hurt a fly, he was found in a dumpster just a few months ago.

Many more will die this winter, even with the good work done by the Egan Warming Center on those coldest of nights.

What is the solution to the very immediate crisis we face?

The Eugene City Council has given a green light to at least one rest stop in every ward of the city. The work of Community Supported Shelters (CSS) and Nightingale Health Sanctuary has demonstrated that these rest stops are effective and help people get back on their feet. They are inexpensive and quick to build.

In addition to my work as a minister at First Christian Church, where we serve more than 20,000 people in need every year, I direct SquareOne Villages, the nonprofit that built Opportunity Village, which has provided shelter to more than 120 people in the past three years.

This spring we will be building Emerald Village Eugene, using tiny homes for very low-income residents. We still need to raise about $190,000 to finish that project and we are working on additional projects in neighboring rural communities that cut the cost of affordable housing by 50 to 60 percent.

The long-term solution is permanent, affordable housing — the work "upstream" we are trying to do at SquareOne. But right now we need temporary shelter.

It would take just $60,000 for CSS to construct and operate another rest stop for one year. I urge our community to get behind the expansion of these rest stops throughout the city so that we can respond to the immediate crisis at hand and people like me can get back to work on the longer-term solution of permanent, affordable housing, so that every person who seeks and deserves a home may find one.

Dan Bryant is a minister at First Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) in Eugene and executive director of SquareOne Villages.

ONWARD CITY HALL

Years of deliberation, millions of tax dollars spent, and still nothing to show but a city block of gravel flats and an angry clutch of frustrated taxpayers: A sharply divided Eugene City Council agreed last week to pursue a costly plan (of as-of-yet dubious legal merit) to erect a shiny new City Hall building on a county-owned plot north of the Park Blocks downtown.

After bureaucratic wishful thinking, inadequate planning and opaque city management the City Hall saga has abraded the public trust, though incoming Mayor Lucy Vinis wants to restore faith in the project.

"We need to restore the sense that the city is being responsible with tax dollars," Vinis says.

Despite baby steps made Dec. 14 at the City Council meeting, City Hall still has major hurdles to clear, including a court ruling to determine whether a 160-year-old deed restriction will limit the city-county land transfer. Many wonder whether city leaders have the mettle to complete their quest to build an attractive and durable City Hall without millions more taxpayer dollars going to waste.

"My opinion is the same as everyone else's," says Emily Semple, the recently elected Ward 1 City Councilor. "It's been a fiasco."

City Manager Jon Ruiz revealed this past summer that plans drawn up for City Hall by Rowell Brokaw Architects would exceed the approved budget by approximately $10 million. The Register-Guard reported that Ruiz knew months in advance that the city was facing a hard financial pill to swallow, but for whatever reason decided to keep it under his hat until the last possible moment.

Once brought up to speed, city councilors got cold feet and began exploring a potential land swap involving the former City Hall site and the county's "butterfly" parking lot. The city even rekindled the popular riverfront EWEB City Hall idea for a short while.

'The history is, the public was never interested in paying for a new City Hall.'

— MAYOR-ELECT LUCY VINIS

"It's shaken my faith in the system," Semple says, adding that the floundering City Hall Project is partly what spurred her to run for office in the first place.

She calls it a "nightmare," the silver lining of which is that it "got people stirred up and paying attention."

"That's what we want," Semple adds.

Mayor-elect Lucy Vinis doesn't doubt that there are a lot of eyes on the City Hall issue.

"One thing is very clear," Vinis says, "City Council and staff have learned a lesson."

For her part, Vinis says she's pleased with City Council's decision to prioritize a design that keeps city headquarters close to the County Courthouse and Farmers Market, but agrees the city's recent mistakes have tested Eugeneans' patience across wards.

"The history is, the public was never interested in paying for a new City Hall," Vinis says.

Vinis acknowledges a major challenge upon taking office next month is earning back the public trust. There are several avenues of approach, she notes.

Details remain to be hammered out, but Vinis is considering a handful of different, innovative ways to keep taxpayers in the loop when it comes to projects like City Hall. She envisions a spreadsheet available online that would list active city projects, updated regularly to show their status. She would also like to touch base monthly with a State-of-the-City-style report published in local newspapers the R-G and Eugene Weekly.

Furthermore, she's open to calls she heard during the election for the hiring of an independent city performance auditor.

Vinis, too, is aware that Ruiz's withholding information has made him a lightning rod for criticism. Ruiz has said there's "no particular reason" he kept council in the dark and Vinis takes him at his word. She suspects he acted without malicious intent, she says.

Vinis points out that the city manager form of government is at the center of a lot of tension these days. It's unclear to Eugene's next mayor whether Ruiz's silence was a judgment error or if he was merely carrying out confused orders given to him by an uncommunicative council.

"It's something to pay close attention to," Vinis says.

No discussions of City Hall are currently on the council's tentative agenda for January 2017 ■

BILLS IN 2017 LEGISLATURE AIM TO PROTECT CIVIL RIGHTS AND HEALTH CARE

Barely two weeks after President-elect Donald Trump is sworn in, Oregon's regular legislative session will begin Feb. 1.

Multiple bills being drafted aim to address civil rights, human rights and health care. And while some bills are also being designed to protect existing state laws, others are being proposed to fill in the gaps in federal laws and protections that could be affected by the Trump administration.

Several Oregon elected officials and members of human rights advocacy groups echo the urgency of legislation protecting civil rights, from those of the children of immigrants to the rights of the LGBTQ community.

Diane Goodwin is the communications director for Basic Rights Oregon (BRO), a public policy advocacy group for LGBTQ Oregonians, and she says that while "Oregon has been on the forefront of LGBTQ equality nationally for many years ... many barriers still exist for transgender Oregonians."

One bill the group is working on would provide equal health care benefits to people regardless of gender identity. "Basically with this bill, we know that a lot of transgender people still face health care discrimination in Oregon," Goodwin says. "We have gender identity included within the Oregon Health Plan, although it's not comprehensive, we've made a lot of progress on it."

BRO is also drafting a legislative concept which would simplify the process for transgender people applying to obtain new identity documents like birth certificates, and they hope to find multiple sponsors in the upcoming session. "So a lot of trans folks when they transition need to update their name and gender markers, and right now the process is really hard to navigate, it's intrusive and it's costly," Goodwin says.

Andrea Williams with immigrant rights group Causa says there are a number of inspiring bills coming up in the 2017 Legislature. "[We'll see] things like health care for all kids, to cover immigrant children under the Oregon health care plan; a bill to end profiling and to address the affordable housing situation." She adds, "We have an opportunity to be different as a state."

Sen. Floyd Prozanski, [D] District 4, is working on a bill regarding grand jury recordation. He says Oregon is one of two states — Louisiana is the other — which does not record grand jury proceedings.

Issues can arise under the current state law because "one of the grand jurors is appointed by the other grand jurors to take notes of the testimony that is given before the grand jury," Prozanski says. Recordation would ensure testimonies are not misinterpreted or the person on trial doesn't tell a story different from what is written down, according to Prozanski.

"And as you can imagine whoever that individual is they could be more attentive than another person, they could also have their own filters as to what they think is important as to what they might jot down as to what they heard them say, but the way they write it may not be exactly how it was said." He adds, "So it makes a lot of sense to me, and many others, that we should go ahead and have those proceedings recorded."

Prozanski, who is a prosecutor in addition to a legislator, says he is supporting another bill that falls under the civil rights scope by making discovery — information required to be shared by both parties in court cases — costs more affordable. "I know that the defense bar has been concerned with some of the cost for discovery and it varies from county to county so there's a bill that may have some uniformity in what can be charged," he says.

Prozanski supports the state prohibition on using local law enforcement to enforce federal immigration laws and cites attacks on it as an area of concern.

He says, "I've heard at least two House members who were looking at trying to overturn that or repeal that prohibition." He adds, "So that will come through judiciary, and I will be pretty zealous in ensuring that we maintain what we have now because our local law enforcement resources are so limited and they really need to be focused on what the community needs to be doing and not be at the charge and direction of the federal government."

Newly appointed state Sen. James Manning just made a trip to Salem and says he is waiting to find out which committees he'll be appointed to. He says he's keeping an eye on health care for all and will be paying close attention to how veterans are impacted. "We still have a significant number of our population that are not currently receiving healthcare," Manning says. "Children and women in particular, I'm really concerned about that — in particular our rural areas to make sure we are doing the proper outreach to provide them with the resources that they need." ■

ACTIVIST ALERT

- At 7 pm Wednesday, Dec. 28, there will be a public meeting regarding The Future of Tsunami Books. The lease for Tsunami Books is up June 30, 2017, Scott Landfield of Tsunami says. Will it continue at its present location, will it be moved, or will it dissolve? The facts will be presented, followed by a facilitated question and answer, and discussion period. An as-yet unscheduled second meeting by invite will be held to deal with specific financial issues. Email tsunami1@opusnet.com with questions or comments.

- In case you missed it on EW's Facebook page, check out the recording by Eagle Park Slim on the theme of "Give" on our blog and go online and peruse our "Give Guide" as you ponder ways to fight Donald Trump's agenda. You will also find the last two Christmas songs recorded by Slim, "Every Day" and "Young Mary," both backed by Paul Biondi on saxophone. You can volunteer your time, material items or make tax-deductible donations to a plethora of amazing organizations. Did we miss any? Tell us about it in a letter to the editor sent to letters@eugeneweekly.com.

- Egan Warming Centers have activated eight nights so far this month, and more cold weather is possible for the holidays so more volunteers are needed to staff this vital shelter option for the unhoused. Egan has scheduled one more new volunteer orientation this month at 6:30 pm Thursday, Dec. 22, at the First Christian Church 1166 Oak Street, in the chapel. Note that the parking lot across the alley behind the church is a pay-to-park lot seven days a week, 24 hours a day.

POLLUTION UPDATE

The Oregon Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) fined Eugene-based Apex Machinery, Inc. $6,095 on Dec. 14 for Clean Water Act violations at its facility located at 100 Polk Street. DEQ fined Apex for failure to monitor for pH, oil & grease, suspended solids, copper, lead and zinc. DEQ noted that "the system that protects water quality in Oregon is highly dependent on permit registrants complying with the monitoring requirements of their permits," and that failure to comply with these requirements is "considered to be among the most serious of violations."

HAPPENING PEOPLE

BY PAUL NEEVEL

VIA FILIPE

"As a kid, I did drama, music and dance," says Via Filipe, who grew up in Salt Lake City. "At first, my mom didn't allow sports." But her mother later relented, and in high school Filipe excelled at volleyball, basketball and track. She won a volleyball scholarship to the University of South Alabama in Mobile, and also played for the USA Junior National Team in Europe and for a pro team in South America. "I fell in love with coaching," says Filipe, who left school after her senior year in 2006, a few credits shy of a degree in electrical engineering, to coach a team in an inner-city sports program in Mobile. Then she got married and had a daughter, Jaryah, a son, Jamaize, and a second daughter, Jenovae, before the family moved to Eugene in 2010. Filipe now has a second son, Lona, 21 months of age, while she also went through a divorce early in 2016. "I gained weight with the kids," she says of her first three children, so she became certified as a personal trainer and opened an exercise gym, GNG Fitness, in 2013. "I wanted to create a training environment that was comfortable and motivating." In 2015, she and a partner, Leon Ireland, started a nonprofit, Athletes United, to provide coaching and competition to talented young athletes. They raised funds and last month brought a Jr. Pee Wee team (ages 8-11) from the Willamette Valley to the National Youth Football Tournament in Las Vegas, where she was the first-ever female coach. In the photo, she shows off the second-place trophy they won. Learn more about GNG Fitness and Athletes United on their Facebook pages.

SLANT

• “Community” and “neighborhood” have been the key words through the ice storm still bedeviling some of us. We were impressed by the Holiday Inn Express at Gateway in Springfield that allows pets to sign in with their owners. Twenty-three dogs, three cats and one rabbit settled into warm rooms rented at an emergency rate to their owners for the first night. Huge thanks, too, for the hard-working EWEB crews who have continued to be courteous and considerate to cranky climate refugees.

• The new $1 billion Phil and Penny Knight Campus for Accelerating Scientific Impact at the University of Oregon is drawing attention to Eugene’s Millrace again. Register-Guard reporter Diane Dietz updated readers on the efforts to rehabilitate the waterway in a Dec. 12 article. Long a project of local planner Jerry Diethelm (and EW columnist), the Millrace was once a vibrant part of Eugene city life. It winds loosely parallel the Willamette River and Franklin Boulevard from near Glenwood to the EWEB building. Although a river city, Eugene has long failed to capitalize on our proximity to waterways like the Millrace that provide environmental as well as aesthetic benefits. The building of the Wayne Morse Federal Courthouse failed to revive the Millrace, but perhaps Uncle Phil can throw his money and might behind a good cause, as the Millrace runs along the land for his latest project?

• Thumbs up to Steve Novick, outgoing Portland city commissioner, for his proposal adopted Dec. 7 to impose a surtax on corporations that pay their chief executive officers more than 100 times what they pay their typical worker. As he wrote in an opinion piece in The Oregonian (which opposes the surtax, of course): “Extreme income inequality is, next to climate disruption, the greatest challenge of our era.” Novick was defeated in the November election but hopefully he will continue to lead like this in another public arena.

• Speaking of leading in another arena, we’re counting on Val Hoyle to do the same. Tony Corcoran’s “Hot Air Society” in this issue of the Weekly deftly lays out why Hoyle was not selected for the Oregon Senate seat vacated by Chris Edwards. But Hoyle still cares about issues such as the psychiatric hospital she pushed for in Junction City, and we can’t imagine that she will see that shuttered without a fight. As a staff member of the Wayne Morse Center for Law and Politics at the UO, Hoyle can work for her important causes and prepare for the next round.

• Our Christmas wish for the next four years of Donald Trump’s presidency: That the cold opening of Saturday Night Live will keep on making us laugh and making Trump furious.

• Washington Gov. Jay Inslee is proposing a carbon tax at $25 a ton, enough to raise the price of gasoline by about 25 cents a gallon and raise about $2 billion a year in revenue. His proposal comes weeks after Washington voters rejected a different carbon tax. Inslee’s carbon plan factors into his efforts to raise $4 billion in new revenue, with $3 billion of it going to improve education. Meanwhile in January the Seattle City Council will vote on legislation to end the city’s contract with Wells Fargo, which handles $3 billion worth of city government business, including employee payroll. This addresses not only Wells Fargo’s involvement in the Dakota Access Pipeline but its enrollment of 2 million people in fake accounts to hit sales targets. Fighting climate change, addressing corruption, supporting indigenous rights and clean water and raising funds for education? Hey, Oregon, are you listening?

CENTRO LATINO AMERICANO’S WORK AIDS IMMIGRANTS

The first stop for many newly arrived Latino immigrants, many of whom don’t speak English, is Centro Latino Americano on 5th Avenue. This nonprofit describes itself as a safety net for the Latino community in our region, one that is even more necessary in light of President-elect Donald Trump denouncing Mexican immigrants as rapists and criminals.

The Spanish-speaking staff at Centro works with immigrants to secure community services that would otherwise require speaking English, like Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP, aka food stamps) cards, drug addiction counseling, help with tax IDs, securing bus passes and signing up for the Oregon Health Plan.

“We’ve been here since 1972,” says David Sáez, executive director of CLA. “We’re kind of the backbone of support for community members that are often Spanish speaking. Many of them are economically not doing as well.”

The center serves more than 600 Latino individuals per year.

A donation to CLA can help young and old immigrants alike. “We had a client come in — a woman who had some medical issues,” Sáez says. “She and her family were uninsured and it was involving a surgery. They had a $10,000 bill they were faced with. Our case manager worked with them to find programs that provided support for indigent community members to cover medical expenses.”

A CLA caseworker helped connect the family with Bridge, a program with Peace Health, to pay the bill.

Donations can be made on the CLA website: centro-latinoamericano.org. ■

TRUMP’S ELECTION INSPIRES WOMEN’S MARCHES IN CITIES FROM WASHINGTON D.C. TO EUGENE

The Electoral College confirmed Donald Trump’s election to the presidency of the United States Dec. 19, but many of the millions who voted against him have not given up hope and they plan to rally in the streets the day after Trump’s Jan. 20 inauguration.

Hillary Clinton won the popular vote by about 2.9 million voters, making Trump the president who has lost the popular vote by the widest margin in history.

“I’m not consenting and not going to be silent,” says Karen Myers, one of the organizers of the Women’s March in Eugene scheduled for Jan. 21, 2017. The Eugene march is a sister march to the Women’s March on Washington D.C. that same day.

Myers remembers marching in the streets against the war in Vietnam, but she says she has been more of a letter writer than an “out there activist.” But now it’s time, she says, to express her feelings about what’s going on at a federal level. And she’s not the only person who is not a “veteran activist” who has been energized by their worries over Trump’s agenda, she says.

Myers and her fellow organizers say, “We have many concerns about marginalized communities and women’s rights and the hateful rhetoric spewing from the new administration. We recognize the need to stand together and to support each other for safety and security.”

Myers adds that the march is part of pushing back “on an administration that is just not commensurate with what this country is all about.”

According to the official statement from the national organizers of the Women’s March on Washington: “The rhetoric of the past election cycle has insulted, demonized and threatened many of us — women, immigrants of all statuses, those with diverse religious faiths particularly Muslim, people who identify as LGBTQIA, native and indigenous people, black and brown people, people with disabilities, the economically impoverished and survivors of sexual assault.”

Artist and designer Constance Van Flandern, perhaps best known locally for her stint as a Eugene SLUG queen, is working on the Oregon and Washington D.C. marches. She confirms that the Women’s March on Washington rally location “has been approved by an interagency task force and is now definitively permitted.”

Van Flandern says the march is “a huge, huge amount of work” made up of grassroots efforts spread all over the U.S. She says there are women’s marches planned in 50 States and 30 countries, and “the list is growing.” In Oregon, marches are planned for Eugene, Portland, Bend and Ashland.

Van Flandern, who is handling the Oregon Women’s March’s Twitter feed, says, “We are trying our hardest to make it as diverse as possible: Intersectionality, Black Lives Matter, issues are bubbling to the top.”

She says at this time at least 3,000 people are planning to go from Oregon to Washington D.C. to march. Organizers are expecting at least 200,000 to march the day after Trump’s inauguration but she says estimates may be as high as one million. Marchers are posting videos and pictures to Twitter and Instagram using the hashtag #whyImarch.

Van Flandern suggests Oregonians interested in marching locally or making the trip to from Oregon to D.C. contact the organizers via email at oregon@womensmarch.com or via the website sites.google.com/womensmarch.com/Oregon. You can also find event pages by searching for “women’s march” on Facebook, she says.

The Eugene march starts at noon Jan. 21 at the U.S. Federal Courthouse, 405 East 8th Avenue, and Myers says the route is to be determined. The national Women’s March on Washington starts gathering at 10 am Jan. 21 at the intersection of Independence Avenue and Third Street southwest, near the U.S. Capitol. To get involved with the local effort, go to Women’s March in Eugene page on Facebook. ■

They say a picture is worth a thousand words, but we all know the market fluctuates wildly and the exchange rate is a bear for some, a bull for others. For instance, my dear Grandma Phyllis, bless her, was an avid photographer, but her family snapshots routinely decapitated at least one of us and left the blurry ghost of her thumbprint in the right margin of the print.

Give a thousand people the same camera and tell them to shoot the same thing, and maybe five will hit that thousand-word mark. I call this quality “soul,” for lack of a better word — that magical something that only a handful of photographers reveal in their work. You know it when you see it.

EW photographers Trask Bedortha, Todd Cooper and Athena Delene all have this unteachable skill. They belong in that rarified category of photographers who not only capture reality but somehow magnify it, enhance it, elevate it. Each of them, in their own particular way, brings a passion and intelligence to picture-taking that suffuses the subject with the dignity it deserves. Beyond just having “a good eye” — a mere matter of composition, timing, framing, etc. — they exhibit a sense of curiosity and concern for their subjects that can only be called humanity.

We aren’t the only ones to recognize it. Cooper won a first place for his music photography from the Association of Alternative Newsmedia and the design team took a second place in that same national contest for their EW covers that appear in our red boxes each week.

Working with these folks is always a blessing, and a formidable challenge. They consistently push us to make our thousand words matter. And in the end — as you can see from this collection of their past year’s work — you can remove the timely words, and a great photo will stand on its own, timelessly. It speaks volumes in a language we all understand.

The holiday spirit is strong in Saint Vincent de Paul's this year as the organization puts on a Christmas dinner for the homeless. Individuals can take LTD bus lines 40, 41, 43 or 95 to get to the Eugene Service Station, which is hosting the dinner on Friday. Volunteers from the Eugene Police Department will run the event. According to Paul Neville, St. Vinnie's director of public relations, "It's a really good chance for the police and the homeless community to meet and relate to each other on a different level." The annual dinner usually has around a dozen volunteer officers cooking and serving the meal, Neville says. "Officers donate to provide food items, which is supplemented by FOOD for Lane County and Brun's Apple Market," he says, and the dinner usually provides for 200 people. "People who are in our dusk-to-dawn program and Egan warming shelter have free access to LTD," Neville adds. Community members interested in helping the homeless can volunteers for the Egan Warming Center. For more information go to eganwarmingcenter.com.

St. Vincent de Paul's Christmas dinner for the homeless is from noon-2:30pm Friday, Dec. 23, at the Eugene Service Station, 450 Hwy 99 N. FREE.

Feeling blue in the icy winter weather? There's no better way to warm up than ecstatic dance, Mike Meyer of Community Ecstatic Dance says. Cold community members can find some warmth and community in WOW Hall on Dec. 29 and help the community while they're at it. "People kind of connect with each other non-verbally but a lot of it is an individual experience," Meyer says. This week's dance is a benefit for Community Supported Shelters around Eugene. These shelters, part of Eugene's Rest Stop program, provide shelter, community and resources to the homeless. Donations at the dance will go to support these shelters, though Meyer says anyone can join the fun, even if they don't donate. "I really think the practice itself is a wonderful therapeutic healing event," Meyer says. "It's such good exercise and it's fun — definitely one of the healthiest wintertime activities in the whole community." Meyer, a social worker during the day, says that ecstatic dance "helps realize the vision of really healthy community activities that bring us together and help us support each other." He adds that the music at the dance is a cross between work music and electronica, with roots and swing music occasionally mixed in.

The Community Ecstatic Dance benefit for Community Supported Shelters is 7:15-9pm, Thursday, Dec. 29, at WOW Hall, 291 E. 8th Eugene. FREE, $5-$20 sug. don. — Kelly Kenoyer

THE STAR WARS MACHINE ROLLS ON

Although spectacular to look at, Rogue One fails to take on a life of its own

There’s never been a Star Wars movie as simply beautiful to look at as Rogue One: A Star Wars Story. Whatever his other flaws as a director, Gareth Edwards (Monsters, Godzilla) has set the bar on just how breathtaking this universe can be. The varied landscapes glimmer; a Rebel ship sets down gracefully on a desert world; a moon-sized weapon eclipses a distant sun. Costumes are practical; locations feel heavy and real.

In terms of setting, Rogue One presents a galaxy I’d like to visit — maybe when it’s a little safer.

Built on a single reference in Star Wars: A New Hope, Rogue One tells the story of how the plans for the first Death Star were stolen. Assuming you’ve seen A New Hope at some point in the last 40 years, you know to some degree where this story goes. What the film needs to do, then, is invest us in the ordinary rebels who pulled off the theft.

And what the movie tries to give us in this rag-tag team is potentially really interesting: They’re a group of near-strangers who’ve had their lives disrupted by politics. From the former guardians of a now-sacked Jedi temple (Wen Jiang and Donnie Yen, who are absolute highlights) to a reprogrammed Imperial droid, they’ve all had their lives reshaped by the fight against the Empire.

But there’s no time to explore this idea. As previous films have shown the villains’ perspectives, so must this one, even though Orson Krennic is nothing more than a power-hungry middle manager, no matter how hard Ben Mendelsohn tries. Time wasted on his character would’ve been better spent developing Jyn Erso (Felicity Jones), whose past makes her a key resource for the Rebellion.

Jones, like her castmates, does the best she can (in one teary scene, she outdoes most of the rest of the film), but the characters are all so thin that it’s easier to project onto Jyn what you’d like her to be than it is to see what the movie intends for her. Is she a young woman galvanized into politics through personal conflict? Is she an opportunist with a soft spot for her dad? Or does she just happen to be the one for the job because of her scientist father (played by an underused Mads Mikkelsen)?

Without a strong central character, Rogue One’s theme is a muddle: The film can’t decide if it’s an uplifting story about ordinary people making a difference or a tale trying to darken the war part of Star Wars through Diego Luna’s Cassian Andor, who regrets doing terrible things. Or is it an exercise in nostalgia, a beautiful trip back to the beginning that pushes your (and my) fan-buttons but not resonate once you leave the theater?

As the Rogue One draws to its utterly stunning space-battle close, it seems to feel it needs to hold hands with A New Hope — when it really just needs to pass the baton. (That said, the re-instituted footage of female pilots, whose scenes were cut from Return of the Jedi, does something to address Rogue One’s massive gender imbalance.)

Everything has to be worth it so that we can go into A New Hope feeling energized, even if the story being told is full of loss. So much effort goes toward establishing Rogue One’s part of the Star Wars universe that the film doesn’t take on a life of its own. These characters deserve greater consideration, but the war machine — and the Star Wars machine — must roll on. (Regal Valley River Center, Cinemark 17, Carmike 12) ■

OPERA FOLK

Singer-songwriter Phoebe Blume offers an eerily breathtaking setting — much like this winter itself — in her dark and moody oeuvre. “I don’t have a choice. I’m definitely dark,” Blume says. “But that is my happy; that’s my light. It’s a very honest approach that I take, which is just the essence of who I am.”

Blume, local to Eugene, followed in the footsteps of her musician father and often sang (playfully) in his band as a child. By 19, she was taking private opera lessons, brooding the whole way. “My dad tells me I’m a major chorus in a minor key,” she says.

Her weapons of choice are a piano and her versatile vocals, coarse yet delicate. She is drawn to themes of sadness and mystery, often creating a magical setting in her lyrics, amplified by her opera-trained pipes.

“There are points in certain songs when I bring that vocal quality into it,” Blume says. She notes that her music “is still really traditional, but bringing that voice adds in a different dreaminess.”

Opera is Blume’s only professionally trained skill and she’s had to teach herself everything from playing the piano to mixing her past three albums. “I’m not some kind of maestro, but you know, I get through it,” she laughs.

Now on her fourth album, Switches and Ashes, she offers her audience a more refined and acoustic twist on her classically dark sound. In addition to her Dec. 29 performance, mark your calendars for Blume’s Jan. 15 CD release party with local musician Tyler Morin at Oregon Contemporary Theatre.

Ellis Moore joins Phoebe Blume 9 pm Thursday, Dec. 29, at Sam Bond’s Garage; $3-$5, 21-plus. — Kelsey Anne Rankin

HERE'S HOW PROJECT COUNSELING WORKS

We help resolve different points of view through mediation and open discussion between contractors & clients or just between clients.

While we provide a neutral ground for conflict resolution, our services are most valuable before a project begins. A plan review will give the client focus & clear understanding of what they are getting. This will keep the project on track and may prevent costly schedule delays!

Our goal is to assure clients they are getting a project as planned while keeping contractors moving forward.

THEATER BY WILLIAM KENNEDY

GHOSTS OF CHRISTMAS QUAIN

A local holiday tradition brings Welsh author Dylan Thomas to Eugene

Eugene actor David Stuart Bull was born and raised in England, just over the border from Wales. And for 30 years, Bull has brought a piece of his childhood to Lane County, performing Dylan Thomas' timeless classic, A Child's Christmas in Wales, at Café Soriah.

Bull, a retired chimney sweep, says his connection to Thomas' work goes back to his youth. "It's like revisiting my childhood Christmases," Bull explains.

Bull's performance is accompanied by Celtic music from local musicians Chico Schwall and Linda Danielson. "I do a preamble, talking about my experiences growing up," Bull says. "Linda and Chico play about half an hour — instrumental and vocal music."

A former chimney sweep presenting A Child's Christmas in Wales: It doesn't get more Old World than that. And like his connection to Thomas' prose, Bull says the path to his unconventional career choice also began in his boyhood. "The chimney sweep would come every year," Bull recalls. "We had coal fireplaces."

Now that he's retired, Bull says he hopes to act as much as possible. "I want to use my acting and reading skills, have a little business and call myself 'The Jolly Good Reader.' Hire myself out to groups and individuals who just like the idea of being read to."

Even after all this time, Bull says presenting A Child's Christmas in Wales feels fresh and new. "It's so well written," he says. "It's written like a poem, from the eyes of an adult looking back upon their childhood. It really resonates with everybody because it's universal, even though the setting is in Wales."

And after three decades, Bull's performance has become a local holiday tradition. "I've had people coming back every since I started," Bull says. "Some people get married and bring their kids, and now their kids are bringing their kids. I'll probably keep doing it 'til I drop."

A Child's Christmas in Wales runs 9:30 pm Thursday through Saturday, Dec. 22-24, with a 3 pm matinee Saturday, Dec. 24, at Café Soriah. Call 541-342-4410 for reservations.

Carrie is a sweet and enthusiastic young lady. She can be a little bit nervous when first meeting people but once she knows you, she'll be your best friend. Carrie has a lot of energy and loves the outdoors. She is looking for an active family that enjoys going on hikes and camping, and can get her the exercise she needs. Due to her nervous and excitable behavior she needs a kid and cat free home, but she does get along with other dogs. If you are looking for a loving, excitable, outdoorsy type to be a part of your family, Carrie is the one for you.

FREE WILL ASTROLOGY

BY ROB BREZSNY

ARIES (March 21-April 19): NPR's Scott Simon interviewed jazz pianist and songwriter Robert Glasper, who has created nine albums, won a Grammy, and collaborated with a range of great musicians. Simon asked him if he had any frustrations — “grand ambitions” — that people discouraged him from pursuing. Glasper said yes. He'd really like to compose and sing hip-hop rhymes. But his bandmates just won't go along with him when he tries that stuff. I hope that Glasper, who's an Aries, will read this horoscope and take heart from what I'm about to predict: In 2017, you may finally get a “Yes!” from people who have previously said “No!” to your grand ambitions.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Humans have drunk hot tea for over two millennia. Chinese emperors were enjoying it as far back as the second century B.C. And yet it wasn't until the 20th century that anyone dreamed up the idea of enclosing tea leaves in convenient one-serving bags to be efficiently brewed. I foresee you either generating or stumbling upon comparable breakthroughs in 2017, Taurus. Long-running traditions or customs will undergo simple but dramatic transformations that streamline your life.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): “What you do is what counts and not what you had the intention of doing,” said Pablo Picasso. If I had to choose a single piece of advice to serve as your steady flame in 2017, it might be that quote. If you agree, I invite you to conduct this experiment: On the first day of each month, take a piece of paper and write down three key promises you're making to yourself. Add a brief analysis of how well you have lived up to those promises in the previous four weeks. Then describe in strong language how you plan to better fulfill those promises in the coming four weeks.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): During the campaign for U.S. President in 1896, Democratic candidate William Jennings Bryan traveled 18,000 miles as he made speeches all over the country. But the Republican candidate, William McKinley, never left his hometown of Canton, Ohio. He urged people to visit him if they wanted to hear what he had to say. The strategy worked. The speeches he delivered from the front porch of his house drew 750,000 attendees and played an important role in his election. I recommend a comparable approach for you in the coming months, Cancerian. Invoke all your attractive power as you invite interested parties to come see you and deal with you on your home turf.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): “Poetry is a way of knowledge, but most poetry tells us what we already know,” writes poet Charles Simic. I would say the same thing about a lot of art, theater, film, music, and fiction: Too often it presents well-crafted repetitions of ideas we have heard before. In my astrological opinion, Leo, 2017 will be a time when you'll need to rebel against that limitation. You will thrive by searching for sources that provide you with novel information and unique understandings. Simic says: “The poem I want to write is impossible: a stone that floats.” I say: Be on the lookout for stones that float.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The Economist magazine reports that if someone wanted to transport $10 million in bills, he or she would have to use eight briefcases. Sadly, after evaluating your astrological omens for 2017, I've determined that you won't ever have a need for that many. If you find yourself in a situation where you must carry bundles of money from one place to another, one suitcase will always be sufficient. But I also want to note that a sizable stash of cash can fit into a single suitcase. And it's not out of the question that such a scenario could transpire for you in the coming months. In fact, I foresee a better chance for you to get richer quicker than I've seen in years.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): For a bald eagle in flight, feathers are crucial in maintaining balance. If it inadvertently loses a feather on one wing, it will purposely shed a comparable feather on the other wing. According to my analysis of the astrological omens, this strategy has metaphorical meaning for your life in 2017. Do you want to soar with maximum grace and power? Would you like to ascend and dive, explore and scout, with ease and exuberance? Learn from the eagle's instinctual wisdom.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): In August 2012, a group of tourists visited the Eldgja volcanic region in Iceland. After a while, they noticed that a fellow traveler was missing. Guides organized a search party, which worked well into the night trying to track down the lost woman. At 3 am, one of the searchers suddenly realized that she herself was the missing person everyone was looking for. The misunderstanding had occurred many hours earlier because she had slipped away to change her clothes, and no one recognized her in her new garb. This is a good teaching story for you to meditate on in 2017, Scorpio. I'd love to see you change so much that you're almost unrecognizable. And I'd love to see you help people go searching for the new you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): In 2017, you will be at the peak of your ability to forge new alliances and deepen existing alliances. You'll have a sixth sense for cultivating professional connections that can serve your noble ambitions for years to come. I encourage you to be alert for new possibilities that might be both useful for your career and invigorating for your social life. The words “work” and “fun” will belong together! To achieve the best results, formulate a clear vision of the community and support system you want.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Capricorn writer Edgar Allan Poe has been an important cultural influence. His work appears on many “must-read” lists of 19th-century American literature. But during the time he was alive, his best-selling book was not his famous poem “The Raven,” nor his short story “The Gold-Bug,” nor his novel The Narrative of Arthur Gordon Pym of Nantucket. Rather, it was The Conchologist's First Book, a textbook about mollusk shells, which he didn't actually write, but merely translated and edited. If I'm reading the astrological omens correctly, 2017 will bring events to help ensure that your fate is different from Poe's. I see the coming months as a time when your best talents will be seen and appreciated better than ever before.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): “My goal is to create a life that I don't need a vacation from,” says motivational author Rob Hill Sr. That's an implausible dream for most people. But in 2017, it will be less implausible than it has ever been for you Aquarians. I don't guarantee that it will happen. But there is a decent chance you'll build a robust foundation for it, and thereby give yourself a head start that enables you to accomplish it by 2019. Here's a tip on how to arouse and cultivate your motivation: Set an intention to drum up and seek out benevolent “shocks” that expand your concepts of who you are and what your life is about.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The birds known as winter wrens live in the Puget Sound area of Washington. They weigh barely half an ounce, and their plain brown coloring makes their appearance unremarkable. Yet they are the avian equivalents of the opera star Pavarotti. If they weighed as much as roosters, their call would be ten times as strong as the rooster's cock-a-doodle-doo. Their melodies are rich and complex; one song may have more than 300 notes. When in peak form, the birds can unleash cascades at the rate of 36 notes per second. I propose that we make the winter wren your spirit animal in 2017, Pisces. To a casual observer, you may not look like you can generate so much virtuosity and lyrical power. But according to my analysis, you can.

Holy cats... I planted so many new shrubs, trees, flowers and succulents this year that I just can't keep up with the waterin'.

I'm practically killin' myself, just to keep all them darn plants watered. I must've lost fifteen pounds from all this exercise.

Of course, now that I really stop to think about it, I prob'ly shouldn't of planted 'em all in hangin' buckets up on a radio tower.

SAVAGE LOVE

THE INTERN
BY DAN SAVAGE

I'm having an issue with my boyfriend, and I don't know if I am the crazy, paranoid, controlling party here. We have been together for more than a year and a half. We had troubles early on because he has a low sex drive. It made me very insecure, and I think that's why, at the time, I became extremely jealous of his friendship with his very attractive intern. I fully owned up to my irrational jealousy and decided on my own that it was my responsibility to overcome that. She eventually stopped working with him, and they haven't been in contact for over six months. Fast-forward to the present. On Monday night, I asked my boyfriend what his plans were on Tuesday. (I am studying for law school exams, so I knew I wouldn't have time to spend with him.) Around 8:30 on Tuesday, he texted me and asked how studying was going, and I asked him again what his plans were. He told me he was going to meet an "old coworker" at a bar for birthday drinks. I didn't think twice about it. Then, around 11:30 when I got in bed to relax, I saw on my Instagram feed that his old intern posted a photo of her birthday party at the bar. I became extremely upset, because instead of being up front and saying he was meeting HER for her birthday, he was intentionally ambiguous. I confronted him when he got home, and he admitted to being ambiguous to avoid a "freak-out." I told him that if he'd been up front with me, I would have been jealous but I would have also been mindful of my toxic feelings and not projected them onto him. I told him that as a result of how he handled it, I feel worse, I feel lied to, and I feel insecure. He acted like I was being ridiculous. He insisted it was a last-minute invite and he didn't want to cause any drama. We went to sleep, and I woke up feeling pretty much over it. But when he got into the shower, I looked at his phone and saw that she had actually invited him on Monday afternoon. So he lied to me when I asked him what his plans were on Tuesday, and he lied to me again when he said it was a last-minute invite. I am not upset with him for getting drinks with her—most of his friends are female and I NEVER feel jealous about them. I have a weird tic about this girl, though, and I've owned up to it. I don't want to control him, but I feel like I can't trust him now. Up until now, I've never once suspected him of being dishonest.

Am I Crazy?

Sex months? Interesting typo.

There's another way to read your boyfriend's ambiguity/obfuscation/dishonesty about Tuesday night: equal parts considerate and self-serving. Your boyfriend knew you had to study, he knew his ex-intern is a sore subject/weird tic, and by opting for ambiguity he allowed you to focus on your studies. So that was maybe kind of considerate of him. And since one person's "mindful of my toxic feelings" and "handling it" is another person's "freak-out" and "invasion of privacy," AIC, your boyfriend opted for ambiguousness/deceit-by-omission to avoid drama. And perhaps that was self-serving of him.

Want to prove to your boyfriend that he didn't need to lie to you about spending time with his ex-intern? Retroactively bestow your blessing on Tuesday night's birthday drinks and stop raking him over the coals for his thoroughly explicable actions. (They're so explicable, I just explicated the shit out of them.) Yes, he lied to you. But unless you're made of marshmallow fluff and unicorn farts, AIC, you've lied to him once or twice over the last year and a half. Even the "most honest" people on earth tell the odd harmless, self-serving white lie once in a while. If you want your relationship to last, AIC, you roll your eyes at the odd HSSW lie and move on. If you want your relationship to end, you do exactly what you're doing.

If your boyfriend hasn't given you some other reason(s) to believe he's cheating with his ex-intern or anyone else, AIC, drop the Tuesday night/birthday drinks subject. I would also advise you to apologize to your boyfriend for having "looked at his phone" while he was in the shower, which is both an asshole move and, yes, a sign that you might be the crazy, paranoid, and controlling one in this relationship. And for the sake of your relationship—for the sake of fuck—stop following the ex-intern on Instagram.

Finally, AIC, you mention mismatched sex drives. As several commenters pointed out on my blog, where your letter appeared as the Savage Love Letter of the Day, mismatched sex drives are usually a bad sign. You talk about the libido issue in the past tense, so perhaps it's not a problem anymore. But if the problem was resolved in a way that left you feeling neglected, insecure, and frustrated, it wasn't resolved and it constitutes a much bigger threat to your relationship than that ex-intern.

I'm a 35-year-old man in a serious relationship—the best I've ever been in—with a girl I'll likely marry. I'm happy with monogamy, aside from one aspect: I have a foot fetish that's getting stronger with age and I can't bear the thought of never sucking another girl's toes again. I should note that my girlfriend is more than happy to shove her feet in my mouth, but I fantasize almost constantly about other women's feet. I'm tempted to find paid foot-girls, something I've done in the past but never while in a relationship. But that would be cheating, right? I don't think I can bring myself to ask for my girlfriend's blessing, and I'd be shocked if she offered it. What do I do?
Fear Of Missing Out On Feet

You bring yourself to ask, FOM00F, even if you have to drag your ass there. If your girlfriend is sex-positive—if she's not just shoving her feet in your mouth to shut you up—initiate conversations about your kinks (and hers), your sexual history (and hers), and sexual adventures you might want to have with her in the future (and ones she might want to have with you). If she's curious and interested and upbeat during these convos and about your kinks, suggest going to a foot fetish party together—one where you can suck other women's toes and other men can suck hers.

I'm a man who is sexually attracted to trans women. I've been told that if I'm attracted to women, it shouldn't matter what genitals they have. I've also been told that if I like penis, it shouldn't matter if the owner presents as male or female. Am I unfairly fetishizing trans women?
Gain Understanding Into Loving Trans

You're attracted to women, GUILT, some women have penises, and you find penis-having women particularly attractive. If you're not attracted to men with penises and you're not attracted to men like Buck Angel, i.e., trans men with vaginas, then you're not attracted to men generally, cock or no cock. So long as you can state your preferences in a way that doesn't dehumanize the people you are attracted to or denigrate the people you aren't attracted to, GUILT, you have nothing to feel self-conscious or guilty about.
